Seminar on World Cancer Day: Theme-2025: United by Unique

On the occasion of World Cancer Day, a seminar was organized for students of Second Year GNM with the aim of spreading awareness about cancer, its prevention, early detection, and the importance of a healthy lifestyle. The event served as a platform to educate and inspire future healthcare professionals to take an active role in the fight against cancer.

The seminar was organized by department of Medical Surgical Nursing, Bharati Vidyapeeth (DU) College of Nursing, Pune. This Seminar featured insightful session on the Topic: Global Disparities in Cancer care under the Theme: United by Unique. Session taken by Mrs. A. Shaily Bikai- Assistant Professor (BVDUCON) Pune, under the guidance of Dr. Veena Sakhardande- Associate Professor & HOD, Medical Surgical Nursing, Bharati Vidyapeeth (DU) College of Nursing, Pune. The latest developments in cancer research, treatment modalities, and patient care strategies were shared. Students had the opportunity to engage in interactive discussions, ask questions, and broaden their understanding of the disease from both a clinical and humanistic perspective.

The event also included personal stories from cancer survivors, adding a deeply emotional and motivational dimension to the seminar. These testimonials highlighted the critical role of compassion, resilience, and timely medical intervention in overcoming cancer.

By organizing this seminar, the institution reaffirmed its commitment to health education and community engagement. It was not only a day of learning but also a call to action for all attendees to become advocates for cancer awareness in their personal and professional circles.
